Happenings of Interest

In and Around Coleman

Order a special for Xmas.

Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Hill are visiting in Spokane for a week.

Mrs. F. C. Graham has fully recovered from her severe illness.

L. A. Manly returned from Lethbridge Wednesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Murray's little girl Jean has been ailing for a week.

The Hillcrest Coal & Coke
company has laid off one shift
owing to car shortage.

Rev. T. M. Murray's subject for Sunday evening next is "Dead men go to church."

The scholars of the Institutional Sunday school are busy preparing for their Xmas tree concert.

The installation of the officers of the Summit Lodge will take place on the evening of Dec.
27th.

O. E. S. Whiteside was on an extended business visit to Calgary and other Alberta towns in the north.

Dr. Westwood was slightly indisposed this week and was unable to attend his duties on Monday.

Rev. James Lang of Lundbreck and Rev. Joseph McNeil of Blairmore, visited Mr. and Mrs. Murray last week.

Mr. Davis' boy who has been suddenly ill is slightly improved. His daughter who was also ill is now convalescent.

The special edition is already being printed and will be a suitable present for the old folks. Is your business represented?

Fred Livingstone, formerly of the Frank Paper, will arrive in Coleman this week. He has accepted a position on the staff of the Miner.

Mrs. T. B. Brandon left on Thursday morning for Trail.
Mrs. Brandon will visit intermediate B. C. points for several months.

Mr. Orr, who recently came from Calgary to work at the Mercantile, is still in the hospital sick with tonsillitis. It is expected that he will be out in a few days.

There was quite an array of legal talent this week in Coleman, besides Thomas Ede of Blairmore there were Judge Carpenter, Colin Macleod, and J. R. Palmer.

The new school house has just received its finishing touches and will soon be ready for occupancy. It is expected that a new teacher will be engaged after the holidays.

O. N. Ross has just completed a ninety foot bridge across the McGillivray creek. The abutments which have been cribbed and filled with stone are very substantial looking.

Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Buchanan are leaving Coleman this week
for Montreal and New York.
They will be away several months as Mr. Buchanan feels the need of a long holiday.

D. J. McIntyre has been appointed delegate for the hockey club here to attend the meeting in Fernie on December 10th.
This meeting will likely result in a Pass league being formed.

OBSERVATIONS BY OUR AERONAUT

Owing to the great flexibility of the gaseous material that our aeronaut is compelled to carry about with him, we are enabled this week to give to the public a few utterances caught at a glance.

Our aeronaut, not wishing to speed through the streets of Coleman at too rapid a rate, decided that he would on this occasion carry sufficient ballast. Accordingly he purchased a Xmas pudding which had been made by Ling Dong, Blairmore, and attached this to the rear end of his flying car.

At the outset he was detained some moments at the Coleman Mercantile,
no doubt, he was watching their space for next week. We can hardly do better than give the remainder of his trip in his own words. "As I left the Mercantile I heard a strange and loud sound as if a waterfall was near at hand. But upon examination I found that the sound emanated from the court chamber. I ventured near.
Just as I arrived and dropped my ballast, down came Tommy Ede's fist on a desk. The sound shattered the court and I remained motionless for some moments. Soon Mr. Ede resumed his conversation and presently tears fell from the eyes of the court. They were intoxicated by the words of the aeronomy.

Now by this time the braudy in the pudding began to assert itself and it reeled and wobbled but it still hung on. We passed the president of the Temperance League, but he being a wise man passed us by on the other side.

As I swept by the river I saw a man digging a deep ditch. On the bank he had several specimens which he had just dug and which were labelled "Scandal in high places," "Another false report," "Incorruption is a fake," and "Blackguard your neighbor" or "Modern falsehood." This was oppressive. I dropped the pudding on the degenerate, and behold a fearful stench arose that drove my balloon within the zone of Bailey's smet and now I am circling around it like a madman."

DISTRICT COURT AT COLEMAN

The district court for the judicial district of Montreal, met at Coleman
in the new fire hall on Tuesday, Dec.
7th. A number of appeal cases were held over till the next sitting of the court in the vicinity. There were just two cases before the court, viz:
M. Oley vs. The Rocky Mountain Cement company. This was an action for wages. The plaintiff had been engaged by one Stewart, who had a contract with the defendant to burn lime.
Stewart failed to make good lime and left the country. The plaintiff sought to make defendant liable for wages.
The action was dismissed. The next case was the Crows Nest Feed Co. vs.
M. McRae. This was an action for feed supplied by the plaintiff to the defendant. The defense was that the feed was supplied to the defendant's husband and not to defendant. The court held the defendant was liable for the debt and gave judgment for the plaintiff with costs. Court adjourned.

D. A. Simpson and family left this week for Lethbridge. Mr.
Simpson, who has been manager of the Coleman Mercantile, will in conjunction with his brother, J. F. Simpson, open up a dry goods and gents' furnishing store. They have leased the Barnsley block on Crabb St. and will have a splendid new stock. The many friends of D. A. Simpson are sorry to hear of his departure from the business circles of Coleman.

cures influenza, but counteracts any tendency of the disease towards pneumonia. Sold by all dealers.

ADDITIONAL LOCALS

There is a great shortage of cottages here and it is hoped that some of our contractors will build extensively next year, as the lack of suitable houses is a detriment to the town.

Mr. and Mrs. M. MacPherson of Faber, have arrived in Coleman. Mr. MacPherson will assume the duties of manager of the local bank until the return of Mr. Buchanan. They will reside in the bank building.

No. 2 seam has been closed for work for several weeks. It will be reopened as soon as the International and the C. P. R.
have an amicable settlement on the question of the quality of the coal.

J. W. Bengough will be in Coleman on December 21. He will deliver his humorous lecture, illustrated by his own experience, in the opera house. This lecture is under the auspices of the Firemen.

O. N. Ross, the manager of the Coleman Cartage Co., paid Pincher Creek a business visit this week. While there Mr.
Ross purchased one horse weighing 1670 pounds, and a team weighing 3240 pounds.

The elections for the officers of the Oddfellows took place on Nov. 20th, and resulted as follows: Noble Grand, E. Holmes; Vice Grand, C. Dunlop; Recording Secretary, McKay. Financial Secretary, N. B. Finn; Treasurer, T. Haines.

The Cowley Chronicle has extended the name of Lundbreck Advertiser to its title page, which adds materially to its journalistic value in the district. W. J. Bartlett is to be congratulated for his efforts in putting out such an enterprising paper.

The members of the Helping Hand Brotherhood met on Tuesday evening in the club room and spent a very enjoyable time. Mr. Williams showed a number of pictures with the aid of a microscope.
They were mostly on scenes on the main line and Vancouver.
Rev. T. M. Murray also showed a number of pictures and gave a reading. Tea, coffee and cake were served.

Rev. W. M. Rochester, western secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance, addressed a meeting on the work of the Alliance in the west. The meeting which was held in the Institutional church was fairly well attended. At the close an organisation meeting was held at which the following officers were elected: President, Rev.
T. W. Murray; Vice President,
Rev. Mr. MacMorine; Sec. Treas.,
Mrs. W. L. Jubbit.

THE COAL SITUATION

In the light of recent events it is only fair to the miners and business men that this paper should endeavor as far as possible to publish any information that may lead to renewed coal mining activity. We quote at length an article taken from a leading paper on the prairie, viz. the Winnipeg Telegram: "Optimistic views are being taken by the Saskatchewan government regarding the fuel supply for farmers of that province. It is a fact that Saskatchewan and Alberta with their unrivalled agricultural resources are severely handicapped by lack of an adequate supply of cheap domestic fuel. The fuel supply of many farmers of the prairie provinces is unreasonably costly. A great territory is virtually dependent throughout the winter for its food supply on the coalfields of the Crow's Nest and Lethbridge districts, though an increasing supply of soft coal is being mined each year at such places as Redwan within the Saskatchewan provincial boundaries. Nevertheless the country as a whole is dependent on a long haul over an open prairie country, liable at any time to interruption by storms and drifts. In more limited quantities American anthracite also finds its way into the country from the head of the lakes through Winnipeg, but this supply is limited and not easily available when it has to be laid down at distant prairie points, while its price by the time it is delivered makes it a luxury rather than a staple. Settlement is so rapid the conditions are created which would be quite abnormal in a settled community, particularly this one of domestic food supply. Therefore any measures in the direction of locating and developing local coal supplies are laudable and to be encouraged."

Although the article deals slightly with the lack of coal mines on the prairie it reiterates emphatically that there is a great shortage of coal there. The population has been growing so rapidly and the winters so severe that it is not to be wondered that the call is for coal, hard or soft.

The long haulage across the prairie is of course one great obstacle to cheap fuel but we have yet to learn that the farmers there are complaining of the price of coal of any description. The farmers fondly hoped that when the Crow's Nest lease was completed that sufficient supplies would be shipped to the prairie. But the people of the prairie were doomed to disappointment.

First we learned that the wheat crop interfered with the haulage of coal and next we learned that the shortage of cars was so great that it was impossible to ship sufficient quantities of soft coal. And now what do we learn.

THE C.P.R. HAS GONE INTO COAL MINING AND IS NOW A DANGEROUS RIVAL OF OTHER COMPANIES WHO HAVE NO FACILITIES FOR TRANSPORTATION OTHER THAN VIA THE C.P.R.

A crude state of affairs. To make matters worse the C.P.R. have raised the tariff on every car carrying any body else's coal to the prairie. And we know for a fact that one company which had $60,000 worth of orders on the prairie either had to cancel the orders or ship at a loss.

If this is not a cornering of the market, if this is not a monopolized trust with a double-bitted axe behind it, we should like some name not yet discovered that would correctly describe the actions of the above company.

We hope sincerely that the local coal companies are not manipulating their output for the broker's benefit, but that they are only awaiting an opportunity when they can mine every possible ton that can be mined. The prairie is suffering and the Pass is suffering.

BURNED TO DEATH

A gloom was cast over Cowley last Thursday when it became known that Mrs. Hayden, the young wife of a rancher living several miles from town, had met her death through fire. While in the act of lighting the fire she made use of the oil can with the usual result that the oil ignited, causing an explosion which set fire to the house and her clothing. Her little infant lying in a cot near by was first to be thought of. She hastened to it and brought the little one to safety. While doing this the wind had fanned the fire into her clothing and very soon she was enveloped and succumbed to the flames.

Her husband was not home at the time and is horror stricken at the dreadful fate of his wife, who had but entered upon the threshold of married life and begun to gather around her everything that would mean for their future happiness and prosperity. Mrs. Hayden was a favorite with all who knew her and had numerous friends in Cowley, where she had resided prior to her marriage. She had but turned her nineteenth birthday and was married about a year ago. Being wiped away in the bloom of life this case is the saddest in our history, and the sympathy of the whole community goes forth to the sorrowing husband and relatives in their bereavement. The funeral took place Saturday forenoon and was largely attended, the remains being interred in the Livingstone cemetery. Sympathetic references were made from Cowley pulpits Sunday.

Hustling Town

The day school closes on the 24th for the Christmas holidays.

Dr. Cartwright, dentist, arrived here Tuesday, and will remain a week.

Mrs. (Dr.) Donald, who has been visiting her daughter at Lethbridge, has returned home.

The C. P. R. has a party of surveyors at work surveying for a new line along the river.

The weather was extremely cold the past week. On Monday night the glass registered 28 below.

Mrs. Harkins was in town from north on Wednesday, and returned with a load of provisions for the Head Syndicate.

Rumor has it that a bachelor's ball is being arranged for Christmas week. Such an affair should be a bonanza for there is certainly an over plus here.

Christmas has already appeared in Lundbreck. As usual the Lundbreck general store is not behind in giving a display of new and artistic Christmas goods.

T. Madden, proprietor of the Windsor Hotel, who has been suffering very much of late from a fractured shoulder, went to the hospital at Frank on Thursday.

TALES OF THE CASCADES

CHAPTER IX AROUND THE CAMP FIRE

Continued

Looking furtively around the room Zack at last gazed steadily at the deer head which had just been set above the doorway of the huge tent.

"Do you know that that deer's head just puts me in mind of my anniversary day away down in Colorado. You must know I staked a rich silver claim for myself and my partner and I never did one bit of work for nigh three years after. My partner and I camped on the banks of Colorado river and we just lived a life that's worth imitating."

"Well, to begin my story I thought to myself that I would, at times, this time before I glided into the silver claim, that I would by myself take a quiet glimmer up the trail that skirts the Colorado river. Picking up my grub in an oatmeal sack and tying the double-barrelled shotgun into the pack saddle I was making good headway. But one word of explanation in regard to my firing material."

"That double-barrelled shotgun gun was given to me by my old father who used to hunt in the Sierra Nevada years before. It was seven feet long from stock to sight and it was polished like a mirror. Thinks I to myself I'll take advantage of that gun, I'll pack it with all my necessities. So I put my little silk handkerchiefs, collar buttons, pocket knife and an old ring my girl threw back at me and all the trinkets I cared much about carrying in the sills. When I had 'em all jammed down good and tight I corked the two ends of the gun and I felt myself safe."

"Across Blue Bell's pack-saddle I cinched this piece of artillery, lengthwise of the whole beast. I called me mine Blue Bell after a favorite gal of mine."

"It was three o'clock in the morning when Blue Bell and I made our foot-steps visible on the sandy slopes of the Colorado river. After up the trail I could see the rock jutting out almost across the trail, but I went, nevertheless, as I felt I was on a lucky scent. How largely I didn't know."

"About a mile and a half up the trail I saw a deer head stuck in a tree like a silver coin and an overhanging creek. Every time a spray was made it seemed as if some one was dropping the end of the chain. The sun seemed to reflect its light. A few of its rays of burnished light struck Blue Bell and she turned around and pawed me as if I had made the watery river jump. But on she went."

"Around the next bend my companion-at-arms stood stock still. Not a muscle quivered, although beads of moisture poured in a continuous draught down its sides. I gazed too to go on, I coaxed her, I pleaded with her, but all to no avail."

"As I turned around an unconscious shudder came over me in the shape of elk-convulsions, for there before me very blunders stood erect and comfortable, a giant elk, the biggest elk that ever roamed the plains of North America."

"Instantly I seized Blue Bell around the neck and waited until I had determined on my line of campaign. The elk never stirred a whit. He couldn't as I afterwards found out as his antlers had caught in a snag and he was fast. If I had known that what a beautiful specimen I could have led back to the camp. All I would have had to do was rope him, but then we don't do what is possible these days anyhow."

"Carefully I nudged the moose from my gun. Carefully I placed a cap on my pocket pistol. Carefully I placed the gun to my shoulder, and very carefully I fired. How straight I did not know for some time, but when I came to myself, here wasn't a skayin' on the edge of the trail with my head extended at an angle of ninety-five degrees overlooking the Colorado river. Away down near the running water I saw my faithful but retreating Blue Bell turning complete somersaults right in the air. I took my heavy handkerchief and wet it, later tore right there."

"Presently I thought to myself, isn't it time to look around me more? And just then I thought of the elk. I raised myself in an dignified manner as possible, for I thought that perhaps the elk might still be there."

"Blow the fat he w-o-o, dead as two inches. With much reverence I walked towards his highness and touched him on the shoulder. He never moved. I was horrified."

"Carefully I took out my foot rule. Carefully I calked his measure and I found him to be twelve feet long and

HAPPENINGS AROUND COLEMAN

Inspector Belcher arrived in town yesterday.

J. Craig has secured a position on the Foothills Job Print and News Co. at Blairmore.

There will be the usual Advent service on Friday evening at 7:30 p. m. in St. Albans.

LOST—Ladies' solid gold watch, hunting case. Finder will be rewarded. Leave at Coleman Miner office.

Institutional Church Services, SABBATH—Morning, at 11 a. m.; Evening, at 7 p. m.; S. S., at 2:30; Helping Hand Brotherhood, at 3:45. Mid-week service, Wednesday, 8 p. m.

Thomas Roche of Sentinel was in town Wednesday. Mr. Roche is interested in property in the North Kootenay Pass and Sentinel. This company in which he is interested is doing considerable work this year.

The peculiar properties of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy have been thoroughly tested during epidemics of influenza, and when it was taken in time we have not heard of a single case of pneumonia. Sold by all dealers.

The Stoddart company, which is playing to increasing audiences each night this week, is becoming exceedingly popular with all lovers of standard dramas. Mr. and Mrs. Stewart are certainly in the front rank and the support they get is a usual good.

Many persons find themselves affected with a persistent cough after an attack of influenza. As this cough can be promptly cured by the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, it could not be allowed to run on until it becomes troublesome. Sold by all dealers.

A sprained ankle will usually disable the injured person for three or four weeks. This is due to lack of proper treatment. When Chamberlain's Liniment is applied a cure may be effected in three or four days. This liniment is one of the best and most successful preparations in use. Sold by all dealers.

The Allen Players company will arrive in town tomorrow.

On the 11th inst. the Coleman Opera House was the scene of a very successful performance of the play "The O'Connells". The Allen Players have the highest production as used by William Gillette, which had such a successful run in the United States a few years ago.

In my enthusiasm I rushed down the trail and ran headlong into the camp. I told my story twenty times before I was believed, and then as if something had bewitched the "roughs" they packed their mules and sped towards the spot.

In an hour they returned and on an up was complete. "Excellent was a word that day. I found an old friend that before were enemies, perhaps because I was free with the dust, not perhaps not. I hope not."

Immediately upon the arrival of the biggest elk that was ever slain in North America I ordered it to the slaughter-house. The butcher, realizing the immense worth of the meat, paid me on the spot two hundred and sixty-nine dollars and forty-seven cents. I carefully deposited all that money in the cash register behind the bar of the saloon. And during the night I borrowed it back in installments, according to the bill of myself, and don't forget, my new friends.

In a day or so I began to get letters, the singular thing then days for me. They all had the same twang. Here's one of them:

Dear Zack,—I bought a piece of your elk and I enjoyed it very much. I also want to express my heartfelt wishes for your advancement. I also think you must have suffered some terrible calamity as I herewith enclose a small bit of a gold ring which I found in that elk meat. I know you will want to keep it.

Yours sincerely,
Jack Carson.

I got a box of others. Dang, I forgot to take that stuff out of my double-barrelled gun! I said nothing.

Frank Lloyd, of the famous English Lloyd family of public entertainers has been engaged by the Walker Lyceum Bureau in support of Mr. Robert Melkie, the eminent Scotch baritone and will be heard here with Mr. Melkie's company during the Star Entertainment Course. Mr. Lloyd is a good vocalist and a natural comedian. His imitations of Harry Lauder, Albert Chevalier and Geo. M. Cohan were for him universal laughter. The devel comedian is a worthy bearer of the well-known name of Lloyd.

THE PANAMA HAT.

What Came of a Glimpse of the Initials on the Inside.

By HARRIET LUMMIS SMITH.
(Copyright, 1920, by Associated Literary Press.)

An Genevieve came on deck the young man in the Panama hat glanced over his shoulder in her direction. Then, with surprising alacrity, he whirled about, and the rapid removal of the Panama revealed a well shaped head and close cropped dark hair, which clung through many vicissitudes to an unmistakable tendency to curl.

At the morning dew vanished under the fierce rays of the midsummer sun, so the young man's expression of joyful animation, disappeared when met by Genevieve's chilly stare. His lower jaw dropped. The color mounted from the top of his rather high collar to the roots of his hair. Genevieve went on her way well satisfied with herself.

"I imagine he thinks me not quite as unsophisticated as he supposed. Probably his intention was to surprise me into a bow and then to presume on that to join me. And by the time that I had explained that I really didn't know him we should be beginning to feel quite well acquainted." She smiled again with superior triumph as she reflected on the overthrow of the plot. She wished that Aunt Myra might have been an onlooker—Aunt Myra, who had questioned the propriety of her taking the short voyage unaccompanied.

On the opposite side of the steamer the wearer of the Panama hat leaned upon the rail and dazedly regarded the blue water. The attitude, suggestive of dejection, gave Genevieve the opportunity to steal furtive glances at the motionless offender. His close-drawn lips and the shadow in his eyes told well. As far as that was concerned, any tailor would be inspired to do his best by such a figure. "Admirable shoulders," said Genevieve, so nearly aloud that it was just as well that Aunt Myra was not present.

At the expiration of an hour Genevieve had come to the conclusion that it on which one could presume, yet it was far from being frosty.

"As you came up the stairs," the young man continued, twirling the Panama, "I glanced over my shoulder, and for some reason your face looked extraordinarily familiar. When I observed I was under the impression that I knew you."

Genevieve's lips curled a little in spite of her being frosty. She would have, she reflected, to stop with the apology, the explanation was so painfully weak; with to start with, and, moreover—well, without vanity, Genevieve knew that her type was not common.

Certainly never was six foot one of mahogany so easily disconcerted.

"Thank you again," said the owner of the Panama in a low voice, and he turned on his heel.

But as he set his recovered hat upon his head Genevieve caught sight of something that made her start—three shining gilt letters fastened into the leather band. "Oh, I beg your pardon," she cried impulsively.

The young man did not hear her, and a fellow passenger checked him in his return to his seat, seizing his coatails. "Lady ain't done with you yet," said the obliging passenger, and the owner of the Panama looked back and saw that it was true.

He returned with an apparent reluctance Genevieve thought best not to notice. "Excuse me," said he breathlessly, "but those letters inside your hat—aren't they your initials?"

The young man stared and colored. "Why, yes."

"Like an algebra problem, aren't they?" Genevieve asked him. "Isn't there a young man named X. Y. Z., and he was one of my cousin's dearest friends?"

The owner of the Panama no longer looked haughty. Instead his expression suggested bluish incredulity.

"His name began," Genevieve continued, blushing under the young man's gaze, "with Xavier."

"Young," prompted the other delightedly.

"Zimmerman," Genevieve concluded, and she looked about her. "Isn't there an unoccupied chair? Oh, yes."

The young man brought it and added seated himself beside her. "I've always hated my name," he said meditatively. "It's a mixture of French and English and German, of the prosaic and the sentimental. It's fairly grotesque and indefensible from any standpoint. I've seriously contemplated having it changed by an act of the legislature. But from this day on I'll do no more fault with it. When you see those letters X. Y. Z., remember you knew there couldn't be but one of us."

"I blame myself for waiting for that," said Genevieve demurely, "since I've seen your photograph at my cousin's, a number of photographs indeed. Mr. Zimmerman drew a long breath. "And I was wondering why your face seemed so familiar." He made a motion toward an inside pocket, but then checked himself, reflecting that perhaps it would be wiser to wait a little for that. But by the middle of the next fortnight he felt it safe to exhibit the little kodak picture Jim had given him—a picture of Genevieve with a tennis racket over her shoulder and her hair ruffled by the breeze.

Genevieve pouted. "If he were going to give you any," she said, "he might have chosen one that flattered me more."

The sea voyage from Baltimore to Boston, though not the peculiarly arduous, afforded considerable opportunity for progress in acquaintance. Mr. X. Y. Zimmerman might be suggestive of an algebraic problem, but in that case one of his fellow passengers was in doubt as to the final solution.

The Psychology of Crowds.

There is a justification for a preventive censorship in the peculiar nature of the crowd. Collective psychology, or the psychology of crowds (mainly investigated so far by French and Italian inquirers), is a study and explanation of the peculiarities of the crowd is not yet forthcoming. But these peculiarities are matters of common knowledge.

Briefly, a crowd is a new entity, differing in mind and will from the individuals who compose it. Its intellectual pitch is lowered. Its emotional pitch is raised. It takes on something of the characteristics of a hypnotized "subject." It tends to be irrational, excitable, lacking in self control. Many Frenchmen under the terror, gentle and humane as individuals, made poor crowds guilty of horrible atrocities. Questioned afterward, they could not account for their actions. Some flimsy excuse had been given place to them, and that inexplicable something was the peculiar influence of the crowd.

A theatrical audience has the peculiar psychology of the crowd. An offensive play performed before it has an entirely different effect from that which the play would have if read separately and privately by each individual. The crowd is the real controlling factor in the matter—A. B. Walkley Before Stage Censorship Commission.

Forever.

"What's the matter, daughter?"

"Penny and I have parted forever."

"Penny? In what sense? I suppose he won't be around for a couple of nights?"

Louisville Courier-Journal.

THE AUCTION.

HERE is Polly's heart for sale! Highest bidder wins! Speak up, O ye timid maids! What's your offer for a heart? Warm and full of cheer? Let us have a bid to start. What's the bid, O heart?

LANDST. THE BID IS LANDS, my friends! Acre and acre, full of teeming divisions in the harvest time. Any higher bid? O bid! You're a steady hand! GOING—GOING—GOING! Heart like this for LAND!

What? A big of GOLD? Ah! That's a way to go. Better than mere acres far. That cannot be bid. With a guided name, you win! With a lump of GOLD! GOING—GOING—GOING! Name it is if it is true.

Ah, another bid comes! Speak up louder, FAME! Here's a bidder hopes to win With a guided name, you win! For hearts so warm and true! That's a little less. GOING—GOING—GOING! Heart like this for GOLD!

GOING—GOING! Now, see here, This is a serious day. With a heart so full of cheer With a lump of GOLD!

Really—What's that? Speak up clear, Ah, we're setting out! Let's bid the highest and I hear. GOING! GOING! GONE!

—John Kendrick Bangs in Harper's Weekly.

Seemed Fair.

"I'd like to know, of course," said the new man, with some concern, "whether my job is to be permanent or not."

"Well," returned the employer, "you can stay here as long as you please. That's fair, isn't it?"

"Certainly. I'm much ab—"

"On the other hand, I reserve the right to discharge you whenever I please. That's equally fair, isn't it?"

"Yes; I suppose so."—Chicago Tribune.

He Was Better Off.

"When I rejected you the other day," she began, with affected sweet confusion, "I did not know, of course, that you did not know I was wealthy."

"He interrupted coldly.

"Not at all. I knew you were well off, but—"

"I didn't know when I was or I shouldn't have proposed to you."

Her confusion then was not affected; neither was it sweet.—Philadelphia Press.

Her Usual Plan.

Mr. Ashlett-Willie, what is your sister going to do on her birthday? Willie (aged nine)—Take a year off, I guess.

The Reason.

Principal to homecoming salesman—How did you come to sell that fellow Smith, who is on the verge of bankruptcy, so many things and at such low prices?

Traveling Man—Well, I said to myself, "Now, if he goes bankrupt, then we shall lose so much money."—Wieder Salzwitzblatt.

Enlightened.

Professor—"I'm grateful for my sense of humor. Thank heaven, I can always see a joke."

Miss Flaviola—Oh, professor, the sense of humor is not ability to see a joke. The sense of humor is ability to take a joke.—Minneapolis Journal.

Hot Weather Madness.

The Judge—You shot at the prosecuting witness three times. What was he doing?

"Frisson! He was singing 'In the Good Old Summer Time.'"

The Judge—Discharged.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Not Thinking of Himself.

She—Father consents to our marriage, but he wishes us to wait four years. Oh, Charles, don't look like that! You will be six years at that time!

He—My treasure, I was not thinking of myself.—El Motu per Alidre.

Testful.

Maiden lady (puzzled from drowning)—To be rescued—How can I ever thank you, noble young man? Are you married?

"No. Have you not a pretty daughter?"—Magdalenor Blatter.

He Rights Them.

"I am told that you write poetry," said the make editor to the proofreader.

"Yes, sir," was the reply. "I write poetry, and I right prose too."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

Care Needed.

"One has to be so careful in choosing a servant nowadays."

"Yes, indeed. You never know what they will do to you if they're called upon as witnesses."

FRENCH MARRIAGES.

All Probable Future Events Arranged For In Advance.

On the appointed evening I arrived at the given time, and after an exchange of greetings with all members of both families were present, we repaired to the great drawing room, where the chairs had been arranged in a semicircle about two small round tables, and when we were all assembled the elder commenced to read a long memoir, which he announced he had compiled with the help of his colleagues. Thus, to my utter amazement, he began to name all the possessions of the future bride and bridegroom—so many bonds and mortgages, so many houses, farms, woodlands, so many articles of personal adornment, furniture and jewels; the ways in which they might be used or disposed of, what would happen in case no children were born of the marriage, in case of death of one or the other of the parties. In fact, all the misfortunes, all the most terrible and saddest events, had been foreseen, and cold chills began running down my back as I heard each new case mentioned. I was indignant, I positively revolted. Why were miserable questions of business allowed to form the charming subject of these two young people, who had known and loved each other since childhood and whose true and pure affection was innocent of all monetary interests? Could not all have been spared them?

The next day I frankly opened my heart to Jeanne and her mother, explaining the sensations I had experienced the previous evening and saying that in my country, when two persons were about to marry, as long as there was love on both sides and the man was able to support his wife all questions were usually left undisturbed.

They both listened to me somewhat astounded, and then Mme. de R—, whose great good sense was always convinced me, replied smilingly: "But, my dear, for my marriage I not only the joining of two young and loving hearts. We go further and combine the property of our children, the founding of a new family—a home. As every one knows, the first years are often the most difficult, and we therefore take precautions to smooth the path of our children by settling in their presence all business matters, once and forever, and arranging things so that the new life may develop under the best of circumstances."—Scribner's Magazine.

THEY WERE STUBBORN.

A Story Illustrating the "Betness" of the Cornishman can be very "set" and stubborn. His determination of spirit is more remarkable than admiration at times, though it may be amusing.

Mr. Hook, the late royal archdeacon, was once, says Mr. W. H. Hudson in his book on the "Land's End," on the sands at Walsingham, working at a marine picture, when two natives came up and planted themselves just behind him. There was nothing the artist hated more than to be watched by strangers over his shoulder. He was, and pretty soon he wheeled around on them and angrily asked them how long they were going to stand there.

"How long?" he asked, knowing just how long they were going to stay there by his annoyance, and by and by, after some more loud and angry discussion, one of them incautiously declared they would stand as that very spot for an hour.

"Do you mean that?" shouted Hook, pulling out his watch.

"Yes," they returned, they would not stir one inch from that spot for an hour.

"Very well," he said and pulled up his eyes; then, marching off to a distance of thirty yards he turned back again and resumed his painting.

And there, within thirty yards of his back, the two men stood for one hour and a quarter, for, as they did not have a watch, they were afraid of going away before the hour had expired. Then they matched off.

Franklin as a Swimmer.

In 1788 Benjamin Franklin was working as a printer at Warr's, near Lincoln inn Fields, and taught two apprentices to swim "at twice going into the river." With them and some of their friends from the country he paid a visit by water to Chelsea, and "in our return," he recorded, "the request of the company, whose curiosity was excited, I stripped and leaped into the river and swam from near Chelsea to Blackfriars, performing on the way many feats of activity, both upon and under the water, which surprised and pleased those to whom they were novelties."—London Tatler.

AT THE BIG STORE.

This Man's Perseverance Was Very Well Rewarded.

"Where are your razor straps?" asked the customer.

"Razor straps?" said the doorkeeper, stroking his side whiskers. "Fifth aisle to the right."

The customer went to the fifth aisle to the right.

"Razor straps?" he asked.

"Razor straps?" the girl behind the counter said. "I think they must be in the notion department."

"Where is the notion department?"

"Next section, three aisles back."

The customer hunted up the notion department.

"Razor straps—straps?" he said.

"You'll find them among the household goods in the basement," responded the girl in charge of the hairpin subdepartment.

He went to the basement.

"Where are your razor straps?" he inquired of the first salesman he met.

"Last counter on the right."

He went to the last counter on the right.

"I'd like to see some of your razor straps."

"I think you'll find them in the notion department on the first floor."

"Been there. They sent me down here."

"Nearest we can come to it is dog collars. Suppose you try the razor department."

"Where is that?"

"First floor."

The customer hadn't thought of the razor department. He went back to the floor above and appeared a few moments later at a counter presided over by a girl with large bangs and a slap.

"Got any razor straps?" he demanded.

He was becoming reckless now.

"Razor straps? No, sir. You'll find 'em in the leather goods department on the third floor."

He took passage in the elevator for the sixth floor.

"Where are your razor straps?" he inquired of the sixth floor walker.

"Eight aisles over—leather goods department."

The weary pilgrim traversed the eight aisles.

"I want to see your razor straps," he said with some fervor.

"We don't keep 'em," replied the man behind the counter.—Chicago Tribune.

W. S. FAMOUS TRAINER

TOM MOORE OF THE SHAMROCKS WIDELY MOURNED.

Man Who Led Celebrated Lacrosse Team Has Many Times to Victory—Had Not Been on the Team Since 1908—Was in the Great Game of 1921 in Ottawa When Caps Were Defeated.

Tom Moore, the famous coach and trainer of the celebrated Shamrock lacrosse team, is dead, and lovers of lacrosse throughout the Dominion will mourn the passing of the genial, kindly athlete whose name was a household word in lacrosse circles for many years in this country. Moore was one of the Shamrock stalwarts who started to play with his team back in the 90s and through defeat or victory he was always one of the standbys of the boys in green. He had been ill for some two months with typhoid fever.

Moore played in the celebrated match in 1921, on the M.A.A.A. grounds, Ottawa, when the Shamrocks defeated the Capitals, and his last championship match was in 1920. Since that period he had been training the Shamrocks and his indefatigable efforts undoubtedly helped them to win the numerous championship battles which they have had marked to their credit since. For many years Moore was considered one of the best and fastest defence players in lacrosse. He began playing with the junior Shamrocks and helped to land the championship for them in 1898 which placed them at the top of the District League. He was at once promoted to the senior team where he played for many years and has since become celebrated in the lacrosse arena. Some four years ago he married Miss Margaret Burns of Montreal, and at the time the Shamrocks made a splendid presentation to Moore of half a million dollars of the big matches at the Mile End grounds, to show their appreciation of his services to the team during many years of successful play. Mr. Moore was a Government clerk for 25 years in the Montreal postoffice, where he had a host of friends.

England's Best Shots.

Experts declare that the four finest shots in Great Britain are the new Lord Ripon, Lord Walsingham, Lord Ashburton, and Prince Victor Duple Singh. The Prince of Wales' shooting is so clever that he stands quite apart from this category.

Lord Ashburton has for years held the record in partridge driving, and his parties at The Grange, with a big of 700 odd brace to six guns, were such a triumph of good organization that his head keeper was summoned to Sandringham to explain his methods.

Lord Ashburton began to shoot when only eleven, and has had some memorable experiences. Lord Ripon was a champion of good organization that his head keeper was summoned to Sandringham to explain his methods.
